Nov. 2005 winter schedule begins, and a new record is set

Kansai International Airport’s international flight winter schedule for 2005, which began October 30th, will see a total of 683 flights per week (to 72 cities in 29 countries) during peak times, thanks to the reinstatement of the American Airlines Dallas/Ft. Worth route after a period of approximately four years of suspension, plus other developments. This means that the number of flights for this winter schedule will surpass that of 2004 by 3 flights, breaking the 2004 figure to capture the all-time record.

International flight service at Kansai International Airport keeps on getting better and better.
