Cigarette lighters banned on U.S. flights

As of April 14th, 2005, the U.S. Transportation Security Administration has prohibited all lighters from being brought on U.S. carriers, as well as on flights to and from U.S. cities (including Hawaii, Guam and Saipan).
Any such items found on passengers to be in violation of regulations will be confiscated and disposed of, and violators may also face criminal penalties and/or civil litigation.
People traveling to and from the U.S. by plane as of April 14th are advised to be aware of these new developments.
